SIMPSON JURY FAILS TO AGREE.

Six for Conviction and Six for Acquittal.

Verdict of Guilty Would Have
Been Reached But for One Man.

OTHER NEWS OF THE COURTS.

Ohio Circuit Court adjourned last Saturday at noon after a two weeks special term, called for the purpose of trying the cases of the Commonwealth of Kentucky against George Simpson and Otis Beard. The jury in the Simpson case failed to agree six of them being for conviction and six for acquittal. Those holding out for the conviction were W. L. Leach, S. T. Brown, Erk Fulkerson, Elmer Tinsley, Hardin Hoover and Ves Dickens, those favoring an acquittal were J. L. Massie, S. L. King, J. W. Duval, L. L. Embury, J. M. Vincent and Dud Tatum. We have been informed by several members of the jury that J. L. Massie led the fight in the jury room for an acquittal of the accused and four or five of the members of the jury have informed us that a verdict of conviction carrying with it ten years in the penitentiary would have been reached and was in fact agreed upon by eleven of the jurors except for the fact that Mr. Massie strongly held out for an acquittal or a verdict at all. On the first vote the jury stood six for conviction and six for acquittal. The jury had deliberated from Friday afternoon until 1:30 Saturday afternoon, when they were discharged by the court, there being no possibility of an agreement being reached. This is the second trial of this case, the jury having failed to agree on a former trial which was had at the term of court. The bond of the defendant was fixed at $1,000 which he gave his attorneys Heavrin & Woodward executing same for him. It is part of the understanding in fixing the bond at this amount that Simpson remove himself and effects from the neighborhood in which he lives, the court reserving the right if he fails to do this to increase the bond to an amount such as that he cannot give, have him arrested and again placed in jail where he has been since the last term of court. This case will again be tried at the coming October term of court, when it is hoped by the prosecution a conviction can be had which they believe will be the result, as they are now in possession of additional evidence which tends to show his guilt.

Ohio County Fiscal Court met in adjourned session at the courthouse last Saturday. The purpose of these frequent meetings is to keep in touch with the road working which under the present system requires more attention than it formerly did.

Quarterly Court convened in regular session Monday and continued two days. A considerable amount of business was disposed of a large number of cases having been tried.

The case of the Commonwealth against Harvie Embury charged with having used abusive and insulting language resulted in his conviction. The case of the Commonwealth against W. S. Allen charged with having obstructed a road or passway resulted in the jury failing to agree. This is the second trial of the case, the jury having failed to agree on a previous trial.

The examining trial of Sam Sharp charged with burglary was held before Judge Wedding last Saturday. The court took the case under advisement, after hearing the evidence and will deliver an opinion thereon in a few days.

A warrant was sworn out Monday by G. B. Smith charging J. H. Long with the offense of using abusive and insulting language tending thereby to insult him or revoke an assault.

A warrant was sworn out by Theodore Roach Tuesday, against Bertha Roach charging her with having committed a breach of the peace by assaulting his wife and little girl on the road near the latter's home a few days ago.

Feeling is High Against Prisoner.

Calhoun, Ky., July 18.—M. A. Sanderfur, formerly of the Beech Grove neighborhood who was arrested in Evansville to-day was brought to Congleton to-night and is in the custody of Justice Little at his home. He will be brought to Calhoun tomorrow and placed in jail. He will be arraigned the early part of the week on the warrant charging him with criminally assaulting the afflicted daughter of John Smith, one of the most prominent farmers of the county. It is alleged that the crime was committed about four months ago. Sanderfur left the county and went to Owensboro and thence to Evansville, where he was arrested to-day. The daughter of Mr. Smith is afflicted in both body and mind. There is much feeling over the alleged crime in this county, and it is feared that there will be trouble.

ROOSEVELT WILL HELP NEPHEW.

Promises to Stump for Theodore Robinson if He is Nominated.

Oyster Bay N. Y., July 18.—Theodore Roosevelt to-day made his first statement regarding the candidacy of his nephew, Theodore Douglas Robinson, who is seeking the Congressional nomination in Herkimer and Oneida counties, New York. Mr. Robinson had luncheon with Colonel Roosevelt to-day. The statement in part is as follows:

"My nephew, Theodore Robinson, is a candidate for the Congressional nomination in the Twenty-seventh district, comprising Herkimer and Oneida counties. He told me he did not desire me to take any part whatever in the nomination, because he specially desired this matter should be settled by his neighbors in Herkimer and Oneida absolutely without any outside interference of any kind, but he desired to know whether, in the event of his nomination, I would come up and speak for him. I told him that of course I would for I have long hoped he would go into active politics, because I have a high regard for his judgment and ability and he and I are in accord in our views of public questions."

DEFIANCE FOR ENEMIES.

Uncle Joe Cannon Declares
He is Still In Fight.

Will Enter Republican House
Caucus and Abide By Majority Rule.

Burlingame, Kan., July 18.—Joseph G. Cannon will not take himself out of the race for the Speakership of the next House of Representatives. This he made plain near the conclusion of his speech at Emporia, Kan., this afternoon. He said he would abide by the will of the Republican caucus if the Republicans control the next Congress, but that no "muck-raking magazine" could make him say he would not be a candidate.

In other words, he said he would not make an effort to win the Speakership; yet the emphasis with which he spoke made it plain that if the Republican caucus should nominate him he would be willing to serve.

Speaker Cannon's remarks on the Speakership were made just before he left the platform at Emporia to catch a train for Burlingame, where, to-night, he made his third political speech in the Kansas primary campaign.

Speaker Cannon's utterances on the Speakership follow:

"I am Speaker and on March 4 next I will have been Speaker for eight years, a longer continuous term than any man ever served as Speaker since the foundation of the Government. There has been only one man who had a longer service of Speaker than I have had, and there was an interim of four years in his service."

"That was when Henry Clay who in the aggregate served ten years as speaker. Somebody has got to be the scapegoat through magazines and letters. Candidates for Congress are asked—Will you pledge yourself not to vote for that old Czar for Speaker? Oh! the scapegoat! this little 154 pounds of clay cannot hear many sins off into the wilderness."

"If my constituency is as kind to me as it has been for thirty-six years I will go back if God spares my life and be in the next Congress either in the majority or in the minority and I would rather be there in a Republican minority a real visible Republican minority, than to be one of an apparent majority that could not take account of stock and know from one day to the other whether it was the majority or the minority. They wanted me to pledge that I would not be a candidate for speaker if the Republicans have a majority of the next House."

They will meet in caucus and select a candidate for the speaker. I will be in that caucus and I will vote for the man the caucus selects. I know of no crime I have committed that should bar me from entering a Republican caucus.

If you ask whether I want to be Speaker of the House of Representatives longer than eight years, I have been speaker that long because my friends thought I could be most useful as a member of Congress in that position. But as long as God lets me live the muck raking periodical and the so-called independent or progressive Republicans shall not make me say that I will not be a candidate for Speaker any more than they shall make me say, if I will again elected to Congress that I will not be a candidate for Speaker."

ENGINE DOWN EMBANKMENT.

Remarkable Escape of Engineer From Death.

Fireman John Reynolds Meets
Horrible Death Beneath Wreck.

Hawesville, Ky., July 18.—A landslide caused by the recent heavy rains wrecked westbound passenger train No. 145 on the "Henderson Route" shortly after midnight this morning killing John Reynolds, of Louisville the fireman, and badly bruising and cutting Ida Lee, of Lewisport, Wilbur Slaughter, of Hawesville and Maud Williams and Bessie Taylor, of Hawesville. All the injured are negroes. They will recover. No one else was seriously hurt, though several were shaken up and slightly bruised.

The wreck occurred at what is known as the Narrows about a mile and a half above Hawesville, where the railroad runs along the side of the bluff overlooking the river. The train was just rounding a curve and was going at the rate of about forty miles an hour, when it rushed into the slide. The engine, tender and baggage car left the track, the baggage car rolling over and over and the engine plunging down a forty-foot embankment almost to the river. Fireman Reynolds was hurled from the cab, and as he fell down the embankment the baggage car rolled over him, breaking his neck. The smoker and day coach left the track, but did not turn over, though they ran several hundred feet over the ties before being stopped.

Engineer Bush had a most remarkable escape. He did not have time to jump and stuck to his engine, riding it down the embankment. He was not even scratched, as the engine did not turn over.

Fireman Reynolds was of Louisville, but married a Cloverport woman and made his home in that town. His wife and one child survive him. His body will be taken to Cloverport for burial.

The track was torn up for several hundred feet and the train service may be delayed for some hours.

There were a number of passengers bound from Louisville to St. Louis on the train, and it is considered remarkable that none of them was injured especially as the smoker and day coaches bounced along on the ties for such a long distance. Only the fact that the two Pullman coaches remained on the track prevented the front or lighter cars from turning over.

FRIDAY, JULY 22.

The Hartford Herald has not yet informed a waiting public what farm articles it would have cheapened by reduced tariff rates, in order to make living cheaper.

Our Democratic Secretary of War has been received with open arms by the Japanese and with every mark of friendliness. Mr. Hobson will please take notice.

If the Democrats and Insurgent Republicans succeed in breaking down the protective tariff system in this country it can only last a few years at most. The calf will come home when supper time comes.

If son-in-law Longworth is nominated for governor by the Republicans of Ohio, father-in-law Roosevelt will doubtless cancel some of his other engagements to make a few speeches in Ohio during the fall campaign.

Speaker Cannon has been spending several days out in Kansas in an effort to remind the erring Republicans in that State of the troubles which they had when they helped to elect a Democratic administration in 1892.

The Louisville Evening Post advises the Seventh District Republicans that the only way to defeat Congressman Cantrill is to elect a Democrat. Query: If the Seventh District is to be represented by a Democrat why should the Republicans defeat Campbell Cantrill?

Republicans should nominate the very strongest man they can find for the Court of Appeals bench from this district. We have many able attorneys any of whom would be an ornament to the bench and could draw the salary equally as well as any Democrat whom we know.

President Taft will not meddle in Ohio politics. He will not dictate nominations, and has said as much to those who have called upon him in the last few days. The President takes a lofty view of the position which he holds and is to be admired for not stooping to scramble in small politics.

The Hartford Herald seems to think strange of the fact that we are willing to criticize our own leaders when they do wrong. Of course this is something new to the Herald, which is in the habit of following its leaders blindly, right or wrong. This is always true of one who has no ideas of his own, and only uses those which are reflected.

We frequently notice expressions in leading newspapers predicting that this United States Senator or that Governor or ex-President will dictate Republican nominations in the various states, or in the nation. The people should do the nominating without reference to United States Senators, Governors, Presidents, or other office holders or ex-office holders. Let the people rule.

We trust that the Republicans will nominate some man for Judge of the Court of Appeals from this district who is a sure enough Republican. Not that the place calls for a partisan, but we already have six Democrats out of the seven on the bench, besides the Commissioner who is a Democrat, and it is nothing more than right that the bench should be made non-partisan by a more equal division of the Judges.

Republicans of the Eleventh District are engaged in a hot fight over their nomination for Congress. The race is between Edwards, the present Congressman, who has served four terms and Caleb Powers. We doubt very much the wisdom of Mr. Powers going into politics, but we are strongly of the opinion that someone other than Mr. Edwards should be sent to Congress in the Eleventh District. He has already been rewarded beyond any merit which he may have established by his zealous work for the party.

We find ourselves wondering how it could be possible that a majority of voters in the United States would want to turn this country back to the conditions when Cleveland was elected the second time and the Democratic idea on the tariff was only partially put into effect. However, it is not so strange when we remember that was nearly seventeen years ago, and a generation of men who are voters now were only four or five years old at that time. Not very many men who were in possession of property or had no work for days wages then can be found who desire a repetition of the dose.

Republicans should not suffer themselves moved from their moorings by Democrat and Insurgent clamor against the tariff. There never has been a time when democracy has not fought the tariff and sought to blame it with every ill wind that came along. At the same time they have been compelled to admit later that they were wrong. The same clamor was indulged in against the McKinley tariff and against the Dingley law. The only real prosperity which this country has ever enjoyed has been under a safe protective tariff policy. Democracy if in power could not agree upon a tariff law, but it is the uncertainty which hurts the country.

In giving an opinion a few days ago denying an application for restraining order, brought by some stockholders of the Cumberland Telephone Company, United States District Judge Evans, went out of his way to declare that the applicant was engaged in a "conspiracy to injure the Telephone Company," in his profound belief. It is so rare that a widow owning only a few shares in a great corporation should engage in a conspiracy to injure the company in which she owns stock, we find ourselves wondering if the learned Judge does not sometimes see through glasses not exactly adjusted for persons occupying the exalted position which he holds.

A report from the United States Treasury department shows that for the first eleven months of the operation of the Payne-Aldridge tariff law ending June 30th, last, the imports of this country exceeded the imports of any previous similar period to the extent of $114,000,000. This was brought about by the reduction in duties and the placing of many articles upon the free list. Of course European wage earners made the goods and received for their labor a good deal of this money and to that extent deprived American workmen of that much work and that much cash. Besides the $114,000,000 was shipped out of this country and its ability to help everybody along the channels of trade to pay debts etc was lost. Who was benefited by this transaction? Will our low tariff friends please explain to us what we gain by sending abroad to purchase this much excess of articles over the amount paid for like period in our history? The same authority tells us that Custom receipts during the eleven months operation of the Payne-Aldridge law were $302,822,161, and that this amount was exceeded only in 1907 when the first eleven months brought in $307,053,381 in customs receipts. These figures were made by the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor. Under the Payne-Aldridge law the average ad valorem rate of duties on all imports has been 20.95 per cent. less than in any previous similar period since 1890, except in 1895 when it was 20.53 per cent.

THROWS UP THE GLOVE.

Instead of replying to our charge of duplicity in quoting a section from the Payne-Aldridge Bill and one from the Dingley Bill dealing with gloves, one made of sheep skin and the other from any old skin, other than sheep skin, and trying to palm them off on its readers as one and the same, The Herald goes smart and tries to throw off the responsibility for this serious muddle in which it has gotten itself by trying to laugh us out of court. Well we wouldn't blame the Herald to get out of it any way it can, because the water is too deep to wade in knee pants. In the meantime we are still asking the Herald to explain why it's Democratic leaders in Congress always vote for a high protective tariff upon all articles produced within their own territory, such as cotton, oranges, pineapples, peaches, hemp, hides, flour spar and many other articles too numerous to mention. The Herald's party is perfectly willing to reduce the tariff on the other fellow, but when placed in power it has no tariff policy and could not enact a tariff law to give itself from perdition. It is easy enough to criticize the work being done by someone else without offering any well defined line of action in a different direction. Let the Herald tell us what it would have in the way of a tariff law. Or whether or not it is in favor of absolute free trade. In the meantime it is up to it to disprove our charges. The burden of proof is not upon us. We changed that the Kentucky Democrats voted for a high rate of duty upon hemp and that every Democratic Congressman from Kentucky voted for it. Let the Herald disprove it. However, finally they all voted against the new tariff law and against the removal of the Internal Revenue Tax on tobacco, which the farmers had so much sought.

Saved at Death's Door.

The door of death seemed ready to open for Murray W. Ayers, of Transit Bridge N. Y., when his life was wonderfully saved. "I was in a dreadful condition," he writes, "my skin was almost yellow; eyes sunken; tongue coated; emaciated from losing 40 pounds, growing weaker daily. Violent liver trouble pulling me down to death in spite of doctors. Then that matchless medicine Electric Bitters cured me. I regained the 40 pounds lost and now am well and strong." For all stomach, liver and kidney troubles they're supreme. 50c at all druggists.

Misterious Fire.

About eleven o'clock Tuesday night Judge R. R. Wedding was awakened by the glare of flames emerging from the bed room of his home where his son Arthur Petty was sleeping. He rushed from his room to the room from which the flames emerged and dragged young Petty, who was sleeping soundly unaware of the danger which threatened him, from the bed and saved him from being seriously if not fatally burned. After which an attempt was made to awaken the nearby neighbors so that they might assist in extinguishing the flames but all efforts along this line failed. Judge Wedding and young Petty then went about subduing the flames themselves. Fortunately a rain barrel sat beside the door full of water and with buckets they applied it to the flames and in a short while had them under control. Not, however, until the fire had gained some headway in the garret over the room and to reach the overhead ceiling had to be torn away so that someone could enter the garret. In doing this a burning plank torn from the ceiling fell upon Judge Wedding's head burning him considerably thereon and on one of his hands as well. Petty escaped any injuries except a slight burn on the arm and a thorough smoking. After the fire had been extinguished an investigation disclosed that all the wearing apparel of young Petty, which were hanging in the room had been burned together with a number of quilts and other bed clothing which were stored in the room. The bed on which young Petty was sleeping was also considerably burned the wall paper and everything hanging on the wall was burned therefrom.

On account of the exertion and injuries sustained, Judge Wedding has been unable to be at his office for the past two days.

The only way that the origin of the fire can be accounted for is that some matches which young Petty had in his trousers pocket became ignited when he dropped them on the trunk when he retired.

Company H, Shoot.

For the last week the members of Co. H, have been engaged in target practice on their specially provided range about one mile east of Hartford. Formerly all shooting was done during the annual encampment and necessarily with more or less rush and inconvenience, but this range being located as it is at the home station, gives the boys a much better opportunity to practice and improve their marksmanship.

Each man shoots over three ranges 200, 300 and 500 yards. Over each range twelve shots are fired, the first two trial shots, only the remaining ten are counted in the final score. The "bull's eye" counts five, the first ring four, second ring 3, and anywhere on the remaining target two.

The following list gives the name and score of those who have so far made marksmen, a score of 98 out of a possible 150 being necessary to qualify: 1st Sergt. C. B. Shown—117, Sergt. W. C. Liles—113, Corp. B. H. Bennett—118, Corp. H. B. Shown—98, Privates Joe Chapman—122, W. D. Gray—111, Ben Blair—109, H. Wigginton—118, Jessie Hoagland—102, Marvin Warner—101. In addition to these the following men made a very creditable showing: Seymour Bennett—91, Harry Houk—91, Dennis Hoagland—77, Albert Rowe—88, L. D. Bennett—83, Ivon Allen—91, Ira Allen—91, Shelby Park—78.

Joe Chapman will represent the company on the State tour, as he made by several points, the largest score in the company.

No further shooting will be done until Capt. DeWeese returns from Fort Ben Harrison, Ind.

Death of Miss Norma Miller.

Miss Norma Miller, eldest daughter of Judge J. P. Miller, died at her home at Cromwell, Ky., early last Monday morning, after a lingering illness of Bright's disease. For several weeks she had been in a very critical condition, and during this time she had been constantly attended by the members of the family, including Mrs. J. C. Iler and Mrs. I. D. Bean, of Hartford. She gradually grew worse until the end.

After a short service at the home by Rev. A. B. Gardner, of Beaver Dam, her remains were brought to the residence of Mrs. Harriet Paxton, near Beaver Dam, Tuesday forenoon, where her funeral was preached by Rev. O. M. Shultz, of Livermore. At the conclusion of the services her body was laid to rest in the Paxton cemetery near by.

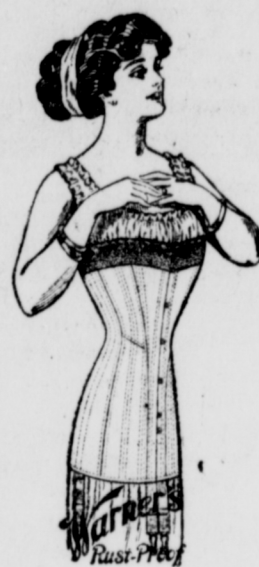

The deceased was about 30 years old at the time of her death. For a number of years she had been a faithful and consistent member of the Baptist church. She was a most estimable young woman and will be greatly missed.

THE SWARM OF BEES.

Some Good Hints on Methods of Handling Them.

Langstroth, often called the father of American bee-keeping, said many years ago that the swarming of bees is one of the most beautiful sights in the whole compass of rural economy. It was formerly thought to be necessary to beat a tin pan or ring bells, etc., to cause the bees to alight or cluster on a bush or tree, but beekeepers at the present time would smile at the idea, knowing that in the majority of cases the swarm will cluster anyway and that noise would not make them light if they had the idea in their heads of going away, says a writer in the Rural New Yorker. A swarm with an old queen will always cluster near by, unless they have a permanent home selected beforehand, which is not very uncommon, in which cases they will go straight into it without clustering, whether it be a hive standing empty near by or a chimney or a tree some distance away. A swarm always sends out scouts or searchers, either before or after swarming, to look for a new home, which accounts for their either going straight away or for the length of time they will remain in cluster before leaving, which time will vary from a few minutes to several hours, and in rare cases to several days.

A swarm with a crazy young virgin queen, generally a second or third swarm, is a very uncertain proposition; while they will often act the same as a prime, or first swarm, they will often go high in the air and start away faster than a man can follow, and go a mile or two before clustering and seeking a new home. While there is no reason for unnecessary haste in getting a swarm hived, it is always best to get them as soon as possible, lest the scouts return and they take sudden leave just before we are ready to hive them. Bees often cluster in curious places, and take fantastic shapes, following, of course, the lines of whatever they may light on. One photograph recently shown in Gleanings in Bees Culture showed a swarm in the form of a cross, having alighted on a trellis form in that shape, making a very fine picture. I have had experience with a large swarm lighting in a tangle of grape vines, and took them out by hand; that was in my early bee-keeping days I now either smoke them out or call them out with combs of open brood, in either case not getting them angry and having a time, as in the old way.

As a rule, swarming bees are gorged with honey and have no desire to fight unless hurt; that is why so many novices have bees without getting stung, and think the bees won't sting them, but find out their mistake a little later, when conditions are different. Competent beekeepers at present have far less swarming than formerly, but the farmers who have just a few hives have as many as ever, often letting their bees use up all their energy in this way instead of making a honey crop. A swarm of bees in the air may be driven about as easily as a flock of sheep with a small force pump with a continuous stream of water if they do not get too high in the air, and can generally be made to cluster on some low branches. Some claim to be able to drive them by flashing a looking glass in the sun, throwing the rays among the bees. I have not tried the plan, but have reason to believe it will work all right. The ringing bells and tanging pans are a very ancient practice, having been a law in England in the time of King Alfred, the reasons being to let people know, so that they might keep out of the way; also to avoid difficulties as to ownership of bees, it having always been conceded that swarms were the property of the finder unless in hives or stands kept for the purpose, or else followed up by the owner.

Republicanism in the South.

The death of Representative Walter P. Brownlow of the First Congressional District of Tennessee is not likely to reduce the Republican strength from his section in Congress. His majorities have usually been large, and it is likely that any good Republican can carry his district. With the split among the Democrats on account of Gov. Patterson's Cooper murder pardon the Republicans will be sure to make gains all over the State. Tennessee's Second Congressional District is also Republican.

In the old days Tennessee was as safely Whig as was Massachusetts or Vermont. It was one of the four States—Vermont, Massachusetts and Kentucky being the others—which went to Scott in 1852, in the last presidential campaign in which the Whig party participated. In 1856 it went to the Democratic party because there was no Whig ticket to vote for, and in 1860 it gave its vote to Bell, the candidate of the Constitutional Union party, which comprised chiefly the old Whigs who had refused to join either the Democratic or the Republican party. It was carried by the Republicans in 1868, but has been held by the Democrats in presidential campaigns ever since, sometimes by only narrow margins, its plurality for Bryan in 1908 being only 17,000. East Tennessee, however, where Brownlow lived, and in which his uncle, "Parson" Brownlow, resided, was a Unionist section during the rebellion, although the state joined the Confederacy. Shortly after the war Republican sentiment became strong in the counties of the eastern border, and has remained so ever since.

As Brownlow will undoubtedly be succeeded by a man of his own party faith the Republicans will continue to have twenty-one members of the House of Representatives from the South. These are drawn not only from the older border communities of Delaware, Maryland, West Virginia and Kentucky, but also from several of the states which joined the Confederacy—Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee, Oklahoma, which is a trans-Mississippi projection of the old South, all contribute some Republican members to that section's total. With the growth of protectionist sentiment in the South the Republican party is sure to have many members of Congress from that region.—Globe Democrat.

What She Swallowed.

Mrs. "Jack" Gardner of Boston has taken up the Audubon Society's war against the "Merry Widow" hat, says the Washington Star.

"That hat is the worst omnivorous creature that the milliners have yet given us," she said at a recent dinner. "The number of things required to trim the hat is frightening. Its appetite, in fact, reminds me of a police court episode.

"A detective was testifying in the case of a woman shoplifter whom he had arrested in her bedroom.

"And, your honor," he said, "when I told her the charge she turned her back on me and swallowed a purse, six suits of silk underwear, a silver candle stick, chafing dish, and—"

"Rubbish! Are you crazy?" the magistrate interrupted.

"Excuse me. What I mean to say, your honor," exclaimed the detective, "is that she swallowed the pawn tickets!"

NO MORE OLD PLANTATIONS.

Passing of An Institution Which Was Pride of South.

In the antebellum days the pride of the gentlemen planter—there were few farmers in those days—was in the vastness of his acreage. Those estates were not farms, they were operated by the "gentry," and they made the agricultural south of those days. It was a common thing to find one planter's possessions which would require a goodly part of a day to cover on horseback. Many of us to-day recall scenes of the old family plantation, look back upon the time when life in the country seemed more given to entertainment hospitality, to the joys of living, than to the pursuits of farming as an enterprise. Market conditions and the fluctuation of prices did not enter into the scheme of life then as they do now; it was enough to know that there was a crop, a big crop growing and it would not have to be marketed before it was harvested. In those days plantation life drifted along under the motto, "sufficient unto the day are the pleasures thereof," and the planters enjoyed life.

But, like other things which go to make up the present age, agriculture and its conditions have changed—the old plantation is passing, the Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle says. They were a characteristic of South Carolina, and largely, too, of Georgia, but there are very few of them left.

In Georgia, Burke County, Washington county, Green County, and many others were known for their large country estates—plantations—in the days "before the war," but now they have dropped out of mind; they do not occupy the place of the day they once did, because they themselves exist no longer. This is a day of farms, small farms and where one planter pursued his agricultural methods, conducted his operations then, there are now half a dozen busy farmers—men who have not time to farm the numerous acres the "planter" prided himself on possessing.

These memories of bygone days and the realization of what a changed and busy world has followed are freshened by the announcement in an item from Cordele, Ga., that one of the oldest, one of the most notable of the old southern plantations will shortly, too, be only a memory—the "Egypt of the Confederacy" is to pass out. The old Huguenin plantation, around which there hinges antebellum and war-time history, is to be cut up into small farms. The "plantation" of one man is to be turned into 1,200 farms.

The Cordele news item, an interesting one says: "It was learned here yesterday, that the owners of the Huguenin plantation, consisting of 12,000 acres of valuable farm lands, located about eight miles from Cordele, just across the Flint River in Sumner County, is to be divided into small farms of 100-acres lots for the purpose of selling them to North Georgia farmers. This is the oldest and the largest plantation in the state having been occupied by Capt. Huguenin during the war, and it embraced a part of the large territory in this section known as the 'Egypt of the Confederacy.' Many of the supplies used by the Southern soldiers were raised by the slaves belonging to Capt. Huguenin on this plantation."

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

A Man and Whiskers.

A correspondent wishes to know whether his chances of success in this world will be bettered if he carries about on the lower part of his face long and thick whiskers. We are unable to answer off hand, not being acquainted with the color of the gentleman's hair or the topography of his head. Bright red whiskers are likely to prove a handicap to any man speaking from the commercial view primarily but the social conquests of red whiskered men have been many and varied.

On the whole, whiskers, it seems, are an useless ornament, displaying the vanity rather than the ability of a man. It will be remembered that smooth-shaven races have invariably conquered those that clung tenaciously to the beard. The Persians did well enough when fighting those whiskered like themselves, but the Greeks, half of them shaven and half not, found the Persians very easy. Later, a race of men, all of them shaven, the Romans, found little trouble in enslaving all Greece as well as all other bearded people. Whence arose the expression of bearding a lion or a man in his den the implication being that the one with the beard would come out at the bottom. Of famous bearded men may be mentioned King Lear. His deplorable condition was brought about solely by the ease with which his daughters fooled him while stroking his whiskers.

In modern life the bearded youth applying for a job is likely to be refused for the simple reason that shiftlessness is written all over his face. The man who is too lazy to shave is too lazy to do anything well. Again it is proved by phrenologists that the vigor of the mind is sapped by supplying life to a heavy beard. In spite of this strain, some men with beards have made a name for themselves. Pericles wore a beard, but he needed the assistance of Aspasia, who was beardless, in his greatest work. Several of the most noted Northmen wore heavy beards, doubtless because they needed protection from the cold and never ate eggs. Moreover this was in the days before Dr. Wiley extended the germ theory, and everybody now knows that a heavy beard is a paradise for bacilli of every kind and description.

On the whole, our advice to our correspondent is to consult his doctor. If he is unable to buy a razor, economy would suggest a temporary beard until he is blessed with other possessions. However, we feel constrained to suggest that in this event he will recollect that even a beard needs a bath and ought to have one at frequent intervals.—From the Charleston (S. C.) News and Courier.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of little Mitchell Taylor Baldwin infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Baldwin, who departed this life July 4, 1910.

Dear parents think not of your babe

As in a cold and silent tomb;

For though he is parted from you here

He has just gone over home.

But with an eye of faith.

Looky up into a Savior's smiling face;

Behold your darling ever blessed

In a Savior's fond embrace.

Your little one so dear to all

On earth such short time given

Has only closed its eyes in sleep

To open them in Heaven.

There is one sweet consoling thought

Mitchell is free from pain;

While we deeply feel our loss

It's his eternal gain.

Sleep on, Sweet babe and take thy rest,

While your face we cannot see,

For you cannot ever return to us

But we will come to thee.

SLEEPING OUT IN ARIZONA.

How The Travelers Pass the Night on The Desert.

"People drop into a loose habit of speaking about the night and the wrong way of doing a thing," remarked the experienced camper, according to the New York Times. "As a matter of fact there may be a dozen good ways and as many bad."

"Take sleeping in the open, for instance. My little trips have not been confined to the Adirondacks and the Berkshires. I've knocked over the whole North American continent and I've picked up some mighty good wrinkles that were never heard of within a 250 mile radius of New York City."

"Down in the Arizona desert last year I was a member of a party traveling between Tucson and the Mexican frontier. The first night out found us in the middle of a flat expanse of sand. There was not even a hillock or a rock behind which one could find shelter."

"But the Westerners in the party knew a trick or two. I was surprised to see them grubbing out little hollows in the sand corresponding to the shape of the human body. They made a deep depression for the hips and a shallow one for the shoulders, with sand banked up in the middle to support the small of the back. At one end they built up a ridge of sand as footrests and standing on it until it was compact enough not to break down under pressure."

Then we wrapped ourselves in our blankets Arizona fashion. We placed one corner of the blanket on the left side, just below the heart, and turned around until the body was covered five or six folds deep. This left plenty to spare at both ends, which was disposed of by giving the blanket a turn around our feet and knotting it, and folding down the upper end around the head as a sort of cape."

"We lay down in the hollows we had prepared—graves," the Westerners called them—and found that we were amply protected from the wind. The latter blew the fine sand over us, and in time our blankets were hidden from sight. There was no danger of our being choked, however, as we used our saddles as pillows which kept our heads at a sufficient elevation from the surface of the desert."

"When we opened our eyes at dawn the ground was covered with a heavy frost. It must have been very cold during the night, but we had not felt it. We jumped to our feet, shook ourselves free of the sand that had sifted into our clothes, and lighted a fire. The desert was very desolate and white."

"Two hours later it seemed like a different world. The sun had dissipated the frost like magic and the sand was blazing hot. That is the most singular thing about the Arizona desert at high elevations. One passes from winter to summer overnight."

"While my bones ached for a few days from sleeping in those artificial sand hollows, I soon grew accustomed to it, and I pass on the hint to those campers who may find themselves obliged to spend the night on an unprotected plain."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one druggist that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Castoria. Hall's Castoria Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Castoria being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Castoria Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

GIRL IS IN A TRANCE.

Strange Condition of Miss Annie Kincheloe at Central City.

Central City, Ky., July 15.—A very strange case of illness that is attracting the attention of the entire staff of doctors in the vicinity is that of Miss Annie Kincheloe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Kincheloe. On Sunday evening she attended services at the Baptist church of which she is a member, and after returning to her home about six blocks distant, complained of a violent headache, although she had not been feeling badly before. At 11 o'clock Monday morning she was assisting her mother in performing some of the household duties, when she became unconscious and remains in that condition until now, only for an instant recognizing her brother, Doctor Kincheloe. Though everything possible has been done to arouse her she seems to realize nothing just lying with her eyes wide open. She is about 21 years old and one of Central City's most excellent girls.

Save the Babies.

The State Board of Health has been notified from all sections of the State of the alarming infant mortality from entirely preventable causes. As the greatest asset of Kentucky is its healthful population it is important that every baby be kept well, and for these reasons the Board makes the following suggestions to fathers and mothers:

The hot weather of this season of the year is extremely dangerous to the lives of infants and young children, not only because of the depressing effect of high temperature in general, but especially because it is harder to preserve all articles of food, especially cow's milk, in hot weather.

For this reason it is especially important that cow's milk be used for feeding babies should be the purest and freshest that you can afford to buy. During hot weather ice is absolutely necessary for the preservation of milk, where a cool spring-house is not available, and no milk should be fed to a baby which is not cooled by ice around the bucket as soon as it comes from the cow and it should be kept next to the ice until ready to be used. A little money spent for ice may prevent illness and its much greater expense for nursing, medicine and medical attendance. Unless you are absolutely sure your water supply is pure, it is safest to use water which has been boiled for drinking and for the preparation of the baby's food.

In practically all cases the mother can and should nurse her own baby. Breast milk is the natural food for the newborn baby. No other food can compare with it. Ten bottle-fed babies die to one that is breast-fed.

Immediately after birth do not use any kind of artificial food unless for the baby while waiting for the breast milk to come. Put the baby to the breast every four hours and give nothing else but water that has been boiled. The new baby needs nothing else and will not starve. After the milk comes under no circumstances should the baby nurse of another that every two hours during the day and two or three times at night.

Do not nurse the baby whenever it cries. A moderate amount of crying helps to develop the lungs and every baby should cry during the day. Babies who are nursed irregularly, or whenever they cry, practically always get indigestion and then cry harder from the pain. Nurse regularly and the baby will soon learn to expect its nursing at the proper time. Give the baby a little water which has been sick several times a day. After two months the time between nursing should be 2 1/2 to 3 hours in the day time, with only one or two feedings at night.

Do not wean the baby as long as he is gaining weight and never do so except by advice of your doctor. Do not follow the advice of friends or neighbors about weaning. If the baby remains well, but after a time stops gaining weight, do not think that your milk is of no value, but consult your doctor about adding one or two bottles to help you out.

If it becomes necessary to feed the baby either entirely or only in part upon the bottle, remember that absolute cleanliness is necessary in all details of the feeding. Because some babies have lived through filth is no argument that yours will. As soon as a bottle is finished it should be thoroughly washed with cold water, then cleaned with hot water and borax (1 teaspoonful to a pint of water) and set aside in a sunny place for further cleaning before being used again. If you have only a few bottles and it becomes necessary to use the same one for the next feeding boil it for a few minutes with a little soda in the water before putting fresh food into it. Never let the baby nurse from the remains of a bottle which he has not finished. Take it away from the crib, pour out the milk and clean at once. Stale milk curds sticking to the inside of the bottle, becomes poisonous after a few hours and may contaminate fresh milk coming in contact with them. It is better and easier to have as many bottles as the daily number of feedings so that all can be boiled together before the food is prepared in the morning.

The care of the nipples is especially important. The simpler the safer. Do not use complicated nipples and especially do not use a bottle with a long rubber tube. It is impossible to keep it clean and it will certainly cause bowel trouble. After a bottle is finished, the nipple should be removed at once, turned inside out over the finger and scrubbed with cold water and a brush kept only for this purpose. After use, always boil the brush. The cleaned nipple should be kept in fresh borax water (1 teaspoonful to a pint of water) in a covered glass. Rinse the nipple in boiling water before using it. Do not put the nipple into your water before using it. Do not put the nipple into your own mouth to find out whether the milk is warm enough. Let a few drops fall on your wrist; if it is too hot for your wrist, it is too hot for the baby's mouth.

No general instructions can be given about the preparation of a milk mixture for your baby. Each baby needs a combination suited to his digestion. The mixture upon which some other baby is thriving may be too strong or too weak for your baby. Let your doctor tell you how to mix the food. If it is necessary to use cream do not buy it, it is likely to be stale, but get it by pouring off half a pint from the top of a quart bottle of milk after cleaning the mouth of the bottle.

During the summer it is usual to bring the baby's food to a scald after it is prepared. It should then be poured into the clean bottles, corked with baked clean cotton and kept next to the ice until needed. Be sure not to heat a bottle when you go to bed and keep it in bed until nursing time, because you do not want to go to the ice box for it and heat it when the baby needs it. This is certain to make the baby sick.

If a bottle-fed baby is constipated give one or two teaspoonfuls of castor oil. If this does not relieve him within four hours then consult your doctor. At this time he will be able to prevent a serious summer complaint with which your baby is threatened. If there is any diarrhoea, stop the milk at once, give nothing but pure water which has been boiled and call the doctor. It may not be too late.

Do not begin milk feeding again until the doctor orders it. Babies practically never starve and they are frequently killed by being fed after illness has gone. Every drop of milk that goes into a baby's mouth after bowel trouble begins, simply adds to the poison already there. Serious or fatal illness can be caused by keeping up milk feeding after the bowels become disordered. A bottle-fed baby should not vomit if its food is pure, unless it is fed much at a time. Vomiting is usually a sign of approaching illness, either one of serious diseases of childhood, or more commonly in hot weather, of summer diarrhoea. Vomiting due to this cause may be the first sign of trouble. If vomiting is repeated, stop feeding milk, give water which has been boiled, cool or at the temperature at which the milk is given, and consult your doctor at once.

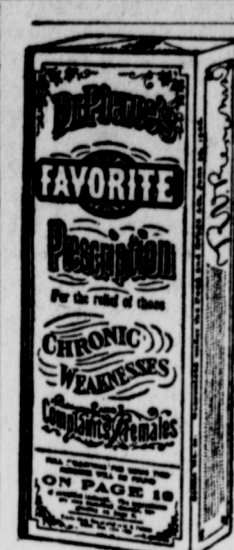

Do not put too much clothing on the baby in the summer. During the hottest weather a thin loose dress and a diaper are enough for day and night. Never use tight waist bands. Petticoats and skirts should be supported by straps over the shoulders.

Bathe the baby every day. When it is very hot a quick sponging all over later in the day will give him comfort and make his sleep better.

Fresh air as important for the baby's health as fresh food. During the summer keep the baby out of doors if possible, and keep it out of the kitchen. They frequently get sunstroked from too much heat in-doors.

If the baby has an eruption or breaking out on the skin, consult the doctor. Every rash is not prickly heat it may be some serious disease like scarlet fever, smallpox or chickenpox.

THRILLING STORY OF DISASTER.

Railroad Wreck Not to be Compared With This.

Airship Wreck Beats Them All For Hair Raising Intense Excitement.

Berlin, Germany, July 7.—Now comes the new, twentieth century disaster, the most terrifying of them all—the airship wreck.

Civilization knows the train wreck by heart; the press has given the stories only too many times—the sudden crash, the grinding noise, the toppling cars, darkness, groans.

The steamship wreck, too, has been described only too often; the crash, the rush for the lifeboats and life preservers and rafts, the darkness, the pounding waves and questionable safety in small boats.

But for terror the passenger airship wreck outdoes them all in many ways as shown by the disaster to the Deutschland, the first wreck of a passenger airship in the history of the world, the leader of we do not know how many airship wreck horrors.

W. Ward-Price, who was a passenger in the Deutschland when she was wrecked, tells this story of his experience:

"All the afternoon it had been a struggle between the great airship and the gale. There were thirty-three of us in the car. Even when we were 10 miles from our garage, with the gasoline giving out, it became clear that an accident was inevitable.

"We had strated out for a three hours' trip. We had been out nearly seven hours, trying to keep away from the earth. We could not help watching the contest with fascination.

"Now rocketing upward, now plunging downward to within 100 feet of the earth, the airship, like some living thing, sought in vain some level where she might find safety from the wind.

"Suddenly the stern propellers stopped. There was a defect in the motor. The wind was freshening fast, and with one propeller ineffective, it was difficult to steer. We decided to alight at Muenster, where the soldiers could draw the ship to earth, but we saw we could not make it because we were at the mercy of the wind. The wind grew stronger. We dare not turn and fly before the wind, however, or the airship would lose steering way and might overturn.

"So, doggedly, she was turned almost in the teeth of the gale to weather the storm in the air. The swerving, diving, rain-beaten airship fought on, inch by inch, sloping steeply first forward and then aft, as we rose and fell in the storm.

"Our gasoline was nearly gone. We had been nearly nine hours in the air. Just before 5 o'clock we saw dense black rain clouds ahead. A moment later we plunged into them and a fog closed around us, shutting out everything from our sight. So we continued for half an hour, then the gasoline gave out and the whirling propellers stood still.

Almost simultaneously we broke through the floor of the clouds, and there, only a few feet below us, was a hill covered with a dense fir forest. Our water ballast was exhausted. Captain Kannenberg ordered some of us to run aft along the narrow gangway inside the keel of the airship to attempt to bring her to the ascending position.

"It was too late.

A downward eddy of the gale seized the swaying ship and down we crashed into the treetops. There was a rending tearing sound. The airship shivered and struggled as if to rise. There was another crash and the splintered tree trunks stabbed through the floor of the cabin and into the hinder part of the balloon, ripping the gas compartments in all directions.

"There we stuck fast, held by the branches of the trees. Had we, with the same force, struck the open ground, scarcely anyone in the airship could have escaped."

Another passenger said: "We fell headlong from an altitude of 4,000 feet to 200 feet, when the downward plunge stopped and saved those on board from what seemed an inevitable crash. In the general rush the mad leap of Carl Hohenstein, the engineer, to the ground had passed unnoticed. He had probably been inspired by terror.

"First we caught sight of the ground, which had been hidden for two hours. The whole vessel was inclined at such an angle that, at moments, her whole length nearly 500 feet, was almost perpendicular.

"Scientific instruments lying on the floor fell overboard.

"Things on the earth, which had been hardly distinguished one moment, became alarmingly clear the next. All of us realized our danger. We were falling to the earth like a stone.

Many of us lost all hope. We judged that our fate was sealed and that our doom was certain. Just when the crash appeared to be coming the airship steadied herself, the falling was checked, but she continued to sink at a greater rate than was comforting to us.

"Then came a terrific crash. A great tree-trunk had caught us and held us fast. It saved our lives. Without it we should have fallen to the ground to our destruction."

"Now we were falling," says another passenger. "There was a death-like stillness in the car. On each face could be read the question: 'What will the next few seconds bring?' The look of horror on the faces of the crew revealed to us our extreme plight.

"For the last 2,000 feet we rushed downward. All eyes were fixed on the green forest, which looked as if it were dashing upward to hit us on the heads. We estimated our distance from the ground—a hundred feet, sixty feet, thirty feet—and then the crash!"

"In a train wreck," explains a German psychologist, "you have no time to hope or fear; in a steamship wreck there is little time for it either. But in a passenger airship there is time—too terribly much of it. You took death in the face too long. It is almost too much for Twentieth century nerve to stand, this new Twentieth century catastrophe.

"And always there is that terrible knowledge that a few passengers less means safety.

"If there was a last man left alive in an airship that gently touched the earth and the path of the ship were strewn with mangled bodies, who would tell the story? Maybe those now dead might have helped him at first to lighten the weight.

"This will be a problem of airship travel. There was a time when two balloonists would not travel in pairs because it was believed that no human being could withstand the temptation of throwing his fellow overboard to save his own life.

"But later it was discovered that to suddenly drop 150 or more pounds from a balloon would probably mean the explosion of the bag and the death of the survivor; so balloonists began traveling in pairs again.

"But to drop 150 or 300 pounds from a Deutschland would mean only safety and that means all the temptation that self-preservation can exert."

When Everything Was Cheap.

In 1896—the good old Democratic day of Clevelandism—meats were cheap as compared with prices of to-day, but nobody had money to buy the cheap goods. There were millions of idle men—hungry men women and children—and every city boasted of its soup houses, while to-day there are no idle men and no soup houses.

Perhaps there are those who wish to return to those good old Cleveland days!

Of course the new Tariff is responsible for the increased cost of living! Supply and ability to buy is the solution of high prices, and no one knows this better than your merchants.—Pueblo Sunday Opinion.

SAMUEL MORTON PASSES AWAY.

Was Born In Owensboro Sev- enty Years Ago.

Samuel Morton, a well known citizen of Owensboro, died of general debility at 7:30 o'clock Monday morning at his home at Mrs. Hayden's boarding house at Fourth and Fredericka streets. He had been ill for several months. Mr. Morton had been in poor health for the past three years. He was highly respected and an excellent gentleman.

He was born in Owensboro, October 17, 1840. He was a son of David Morton, one of the pioneer merchants of this city, and who conducted a store when this place was known as Yellow Banks. His mother was before her marriage, Miss Margaret Daniel. He was an expert bookkeeper and was employed by several of the old firms in this city.

During the term of Col. J. D. Powers, collector for internal revenue in this district, Mr. Morton was given a position in the service and he remained on the field staff until his death.

He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Lydia Barron, of Davies county and one daughter, Mrs. Charles Griffin, of Helena, Ark., who was at his bedside when he died.—Owensboro Messenger.

The Fake Prize Fight.

So much feeling has been stirred up by the Jeffries-Johnson fake fight that it threatens to ruin the immense profits the shampers expected to win from the exhibition of moving pictures. In several cities there have been prohibitions, and it is not unlikely that they will be everywhere. The reason given is the development of the race question, but a still stronger reason is that it was probably the most dishonest sporting event ever foisted upon the gullible public. There never was a fair prize fight, but it looks as if the Jeffries-Johnson fight was a fraud of more colossal dimensions than any of its predecessors. Jeffries had burnt himself out by seven years of inordinate debauchery, and he was so rotten that he was feared that the sores on him could not be patched up in order to make a decent appearance in the ring. He was not fit to stand against any third or fourth-class fighter, much less an athletic young negro like Johnson. This fact can be quickly developed by any one who cares to read through the columns of mush and gush written by the sporting reporters of the various papers and eagerly devoured by the would-be sporting class. In spite of their wild welter of words to make the matter appear as a sporting event, it cannot help being seen that instead of being the all-around athletic fighter that he was seven years ago, Jeffries was a physical and nervous wreck. All that he really expected to do, all that the shampers who got up the fight hoped for from him, was to stand up to be pounded long enough to give them a good pretense for the money which they had skinned out of their dupes. There was scarcely more fight in him than in an old weather sheep, and his opponent came out of the affair with hardly a scratch to show that he had been seriously engaged.

Jeffries has simply gone the way that every one of his predecessors in the championship has trod. The gang of shampers who have been managing them have helped them secure the championship, then the champion has taken his share of the money to lubricate his swift passage down the road to moral and physical destruction. By the time the money has been gone the champion has burnt out his whole internal machinery. Then the gang gets hold of him again and puts him up against some new boxer and fills the country with lying stuff as to how he has regained his form and is the man he was when he won the belt. As the country is filled with fools who are anxious to lose their money, there is no lack of takers on this side of the proposition, and the shampers gather in a stupendous harvest of dollars when the champion is defeated. It will only be a short time until the game is again played with Johnson being brought into the ring to be easily knocked out by some new-comer. Having learned nothing by experience the would be sports will bite again just as lavishly as they did the Jeffries bat, and will possibly be skinned ever more thoroughly because there will be more of them and they will have more money. If one could have any sympathy for the idiots who bet on these transparent schemes, there would be a demand for a law to prohibit prize fighting for their protection. They are a class, however, like those who bite at the green goods games, for whom one can have no sympathy.—National Tribune.
